

EARTH HOUR CITY CHALLENGE

ANNEX TO

EXEMPLARY BUILDINGS : relaunching innovation and stimulating professionals

1. Proportion of Passive House buildings within Exemplary Buildings.

Source: Bruxelles-Environnement, 2012

2. Public authorities subsidies/investment

	Subsidies granted (USD)					Budget	TOTAL
	2007	2008	2009	2011	2012	2013
Logements individuels	309.085	326.662	410.974	225.480	337.094
Logements collectifs	2.346.674	2.983.788	3.502.520	1.338.918	2.136.432
Bureaux et commerces	3.522.042	2.559.970	1.227.299	2.299.428	1.450.832
Equipements collectifs	3.327.939	2.645.901	1.639.713	2.737.973	3.061.411
TOTAL	9.505.740	8.516.321	6.780.505	6.601.798	6.985.768	6.750.000	45.140.132

3. Last call for projects

Information sheet for 2012 call for projects

http://citiesclimateregistry.org/uploads/tx_carbondata/FR_BATEX%202012_reglement_DEF_120221.pdf

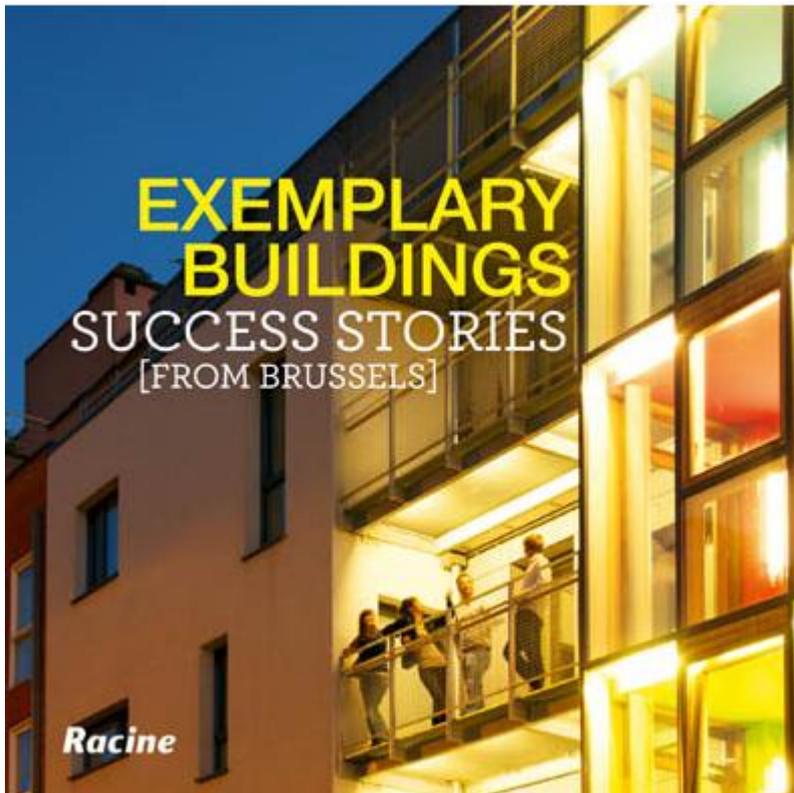

4. More information

www.bruxellesenvironnement.be/Templates/Particuliers/informer.aspx?id=4636&langtype=2060

5. Dedicated publication

EXEMPLARY BUILDINGS: SUCCESS STORIES (FROM BRUSSELS), Bernard Deprez, Jean Cech.

This book can not be uploaded. However, we can send a copy.

In the face of all the uncertainty about the future, is it possible to imagine a city becoming more beautiful, more practical and more economical to live in, while at the same time becoming more sustainable? This was the challenge the Brussels-Capital Region set itself in 2007 - and its response was to launch the Batex call for projects targeting everyone wanting to build or refurbish a building in Brussels. The term "Batex" is the abbreviation for 'Bâtiments exemplaires' or 'Exemplary buildings', and the whole idea is to leverage each project, whether large or small, whether private or public, to spread the word about eco-construction, what it involves and how it can help transform the city, building by building. On the occasion of the 5th call for projects, Brussels Environment is providing this review of the selected projects, telling their success stories.